SENATOR CHAMBERS: Who will insure them?

SENATOR WEHRBEIN: I think they carry their own insurance.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: And where will the guards come from?

SENATOR WEHRBEIN: Well, I think they're going to be counselors. This is not...it's more of a counseling situation rather than a...these are ones, so you understand, that they will be taken to Kearney for a week or two evaluation and then those that are judged appropriate will go to this Wilderness Camp rather than go to Kearney. And so, you know, Kearney has no guards either. I mean these are counseling situations. That is not a secure facility. This will...

SENATOR CHAMBERS: For whom will...who will be the employers of these counselors or whatever term they ultimately are designated by?

SENATOR WEHRBEIN: Well, it's be...I think it's the Brown...the Brown School.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: They're not state employees, is that correct?

SENATOR WEHRBEIN: Right.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: And the state would not be liable for anything that would happen to these young people in these facilities since they're under the control of these private people, is that correct or is it not?

SENATOR WEHRBEIN: I think that's the way it would work, yes.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Thank you, Senator Wehrbein. That's all I'll ask you right now and maybe later on you'll have some of those specific answers. But, members of the Legislature, I really mean it on this. I'm not in favor of it and I'm not going to support it, and I'm going to be recalcitrant and difficult to get along with, not just to have my way, because I may not get my way anyway. There are more than 36 hours left in the session, but we have other bills also. This is not a well-thought-out proposal at all. It's a politically-motivated
